Croods - Out of the cave into the wild

Time	Activity	Equipment	Scouter
17:00 (15 min)	Grand Howl Duty six: Yellow Inspection	Skin, flag, Totem pole
Now that our cave pack has gathered at the watering hole, inspected our emergency gear, and mastered the basic vines and ropes needed for survival, it's time to escape the confines of the dark cave. Let's run wild into the prehistoric wilderness to release some energy with a fast-paced game.
17:15 (10 min)	Steam release game: "Beware the Sabertooth!" The players are members of the Crood family / Caveman Tribe. The leader (or animator) is Grug (or the Tribe Leader), armed with a loud whistle or horn (the "Warning Horn").Out in the dangerous prehistoric wild, roaming alone means getting eaten by a Sabertooth Tiger or a Bear Owl! The only way to survive is to stick together in Packs. How to Play 1. Scattered Tribe: All the cavemen run around the area, making caveman noises (grunting, beating their chests, acting like prehistoric animals, or foraging for "food"). 2. The Danger Signal: When the Leader blows the whistle, everyone stops running and listens carefully. The Leader yells out a survival rule, such as: ○ "SABERTOOTH ATTACK! PACKS OF 4!" ○ "ROCK SLIDE! GROUPS OF 3!" ○ "NIGHTTIME IS DANGEROUS! CAVEMEN IN 5s!" 3. Form the Pack: Players must quickly huddle together to form groups of that exact size. To make it extra thematic, they must link arms or put their heads together in a "family huddle" and yell "NEVER NOT BE AFRAID!"). 4. Out of the Pack: Any player left without a complete group (or stuck in a group that's too big) gets "caught by the Sabertooth" and sits out for the next round (or becomes a "Sabertooth" who stalks around the edge of the playing area). After burning off our caveman energy, we must remember that even the most adventurous Croods need to understand their territory and respect their tribe. Just as heroes respected their ancient kingdoms, we will gather to honor our own nation with its anthem and map out our immediate cave surroundings.

"With our modern tribal boundaries clearly drawn, let's look closer at the natural environment around us. We are going to leverage raw elements from the wilderness—using soot, fire, and leaves to leave our mark like true cave artists, while others bury our organic scraps to enrich the very earth we walk on."
17:40 (10 min)	SW - 16 - Natural material item - SMOKE LEAF PRINTS On each jar put some vaseline - then light the candle - hold jar over candle and let the black soet go onto the jar - then take the leaf and rub it over the vaseline and soet - then put leaf onto paper - cover with another page and press. Clean jar off with cotton wool and repeat. GW - 16 - make compost Compost: Bury a holey plastic plant pot in the grounds of the hall. Fill the pot with newspaper and veg scraps and soil. Wet and cover. We will use this compost for our seeds planting on the 9th sept. "Our prehistoric creations are complete, and our survival tools are put away. Before the sun sets and forces us back into the safety of the cave, let's test our agility one last time in the wild landscape with our final pack game."
18:10 (10 min)	Circle game: Darkness into the sunlight. The Croods have just come out of their very dark cave and their eyes still cannot see properly. Cubs stand in a circle (Croods family) , with one selected cub blindfolded - (he cannot recognise his family). He walks until the club touches one of his family - he says I am “Ethan” - diff name each time and the Cub (Crood) says - “We are of one family.”The blindfolded cub needs to see if they can guess who it is. Switch players.	Club made from newspaper and stockings	Akela
"The hunting and gathering for the day is done, and night is falling on the Crood valley. Let's form our final circle to celebrate the achievements of our cave family, reward our top hunters with their hard-earned badges, and offer a prayer for safe keeping until the next sun rises."
