Previously, we learnt how to throw a line to rescue someone. Remember, you never reach or swim out to help someone, rather throw them something that floats.
05	05	ACTIVE GAME: Reach and rescue Cubs line up, back-to-back, in two equal lines down the centre of the playing area. Demarcate the boundaries if playing outdoors. One team are 'reaches' and the other team 'rescuers'. The leader calls out rrrreaches or rrrrescuers (rolling the 'r' so that the Cubs cannot guess what is coming). If 'rescuers' is called, they turn and chase the 'reaches'. Any 'reaches' caught join the 'rescuers' team. The 'reachers' who cross the designated boundary line cannot be caught. The game continues. When time is up, the largest team is the winner.	None
Do you know what an emergency is and who to call in the event of an emergency?
10	10	ACTIVITY: Emergencies The Gold Wolf Aptitude challenge requirement is to 'know how to behave in an emergency situation' but do our Cubs know what an emergency is? Use this link to get the local emergency numbers emailed to you for your area: https://safemynumber.co.za/ • Have they ever experienced an emergency? • What are they going to do in an emergency? • Which number do they phone in an emergency - there are various emergency services when you dial 112 (ambulance, fire and rescue, NSRI, etc.)? The Cubs should be reminded that even though, an emergency is scary, they need to speak as calmly as possible. Make sure that the Cubs understand that calling 112 as a joke is a crime. Stress that whenever an unnecessary call is made to 112, it can delay a response to someone who needs it. Go through some of the questions the 112 operators will ask (see below). Teach the Cubs the 112 song. Left finger up (one); right finger up (one); bring the left and right fingers together to form a 2 … 112.	Large poster with the emergency numbers on it.

Let's have some fun coming up with a catchy rhyme to remember the emergency number.
20	10	SINGING: Emergency rap In Sixes, Cubs make up a rap, a song or a chant using the emergency numbers to help others remember them. Share their rap/songs with the rest of the Pack. *Film these and create fun and educational videos.	None
I am sure you won't forget the emergency number now.
30	10	REVISION GAME: Call for help Cubs sit in a circle and are numbered one to six. A cell phone is placed in the centre of the circle. The leader shares an emergency scenario with the Pack, for example: "There has been an accident at the public swimming pool on the corner of Spine and Eisleben in Mitchells Plain. A young boy has injured his head and is bleeding." The leader then calls out a number. All Cubs with that number stand up, run clockwise around the outside of the circle, and return to their place. The first Cub to reach the telephone pretends to dial the emergency number and clearly delivers the message. • If the message is correct, the Cub scores one point. • If the Cub hesitates or gives incorrect information, the other Cub(s) with the same number may raise a hand and have a turn. • The first Cub to give the correct message earns the point. Remind Cubs that emergency numbers are for real emergencies only. Always tell the operator where you are, what happened, give your contact number, and stay on the line.	Cell phone
Remember, keep yourself safe, throw something that floats into the water for the person in difficulty to grab and to use to float.
40	10	ACTIVE GAME: Float or sink Cubs stand in the middle of the playing area. Label one of the ends as 'floating' and the other as 'sinking'. The Cubs must listen to the objects being called out and then have to run to that end of the playing area. The last one there must tell you a water safety rule before they can re-join the game. Objects that sink: Rocks; stones; marbles; coins; keys Objects that float: Apples; wood; empty plastic bottle; ball; inflated balloon; boat	List of items that float or sink

It's so important to remember the water safety rules if you are going anywhere near water.
50	10	REVISION GAME: Green light, red light Cubs line up at one end of the playing area. The Adult Leader asks questions about being water safe, such as "can you swim alone?" If the answer is 'yes' then the Cubs have a 'green light' and take three steps forward. If the answer is 'no', then they have a 'red light' and don't move. This game allows the Adult Leader to assess very quickly, based on the Cubs' movements, which water safe topics need to be addressed further with the Cubs.	Refer to the 'Be Water Safe' facilitators manual for the questions and answers.
Sometimes the best help is simple and calm—placing someone in the recovery position helps protect their airway while we wait for an adult or emergency services.
60	15	DEMONSTRATION: Recovery position The first thing to do, without delay, is to lay the victim on their side, open the airway and keep it open. If the head is tilted forwards this may obstruct the airway and hinder breathing, so tilt the person's head back as far as it can go. Very often breathing will start again quite naturally. A person who cannot breathe naturally will struggle for breath, and their face and lips will turn blue. As soon as natural breathing starts, the heaving movements of the chest will stop, and the colour of the face and lips will turn pink again. Allow the Cubs to practise putting each other in the recovery positions.	Refer to the Be Water Safe facilitators manual
Remember, there may be hidden hazards under the water.
75	10	SENSE TRAINING (Touch): Hidden hazards In a large flat-ish bucket, place about 30cm of water. Put in several marbles. Cubs, in teams, need to "fish" out the marbles or small stones using only their toes! The team to fish out the most marbles is the winner. To add an extra fun element, add dishwashing liquid to create bubbles.	Marbles / small stones; 30cm bucket of water; dish washing liquid.
As Cubs, being water safe is part of doing our best and helping others, so let's remember these lessons and share them with our families and friends.

112 OPERATOR QUESTIONS:

- Who you are and what your number is (in case the emergency services need to call you back).
- Where you are calling from (if possible, tell them exactly what your street address is, together with your suburb. Include the nearest intersection or landmark).
- Who needs help? What type of emergency (e.g. drowning or heart attack)?)
