Theme:	ROBINSON CRUSOE (Knots)

Date: 05 June 2026 Duty Six: Red

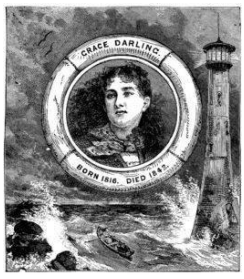

Time	Min	Activity	Equipment	Scouter
18h00	10	GRAND HOWL Flag Prayer Register Break	Totem/skin/ Flag/flag pole Prayer book Register	Kaa Six
The Novel Robinson Crusoe tells the story of a young and impulsive Englishman who defies his parents' wishes and takes to the seas seeking adventure. The young Robinson Crusoe is shipwrecked and castaway on a remote tropical island for more than 28 years. Close your eyes and imagine! Just imagine yourself on a ship in the middle of the ocean. You can hear Captain Kaa shouting commands like "Man Overboard" and "All hands on deck". You better hold on because the rough storms could cause the ship we are on to crash on the rocks.
18h10	5	Inspection: Full smart Sailors Uniform	None	All
Two of the crew members Deckhand Rikki and Deckhand Raksha have just informed Captain Kaa that they have spotted a Pirate ship in the horizon. Everyone to your battle stations.
18h15	5	STEAM RELEASE: Sea Battle 2 teams lined up throw 20 cannon balls (balls of paper) at each other for 30 seconds, the opposite team may throw back balls thrown. Bell sounds, count which has least, reward winners, repeat again.	2 x 20 = 40 balls of crumpled Newspaper	Rikki
Sadly, the Pirates won the battle and our ship is blown to pieces. We have to help and get the rest of our crew to shore with some short rope we found drifting around us. Our ropes are not long enough, so we will have to join them together. Luckily some of the sailors are fishermen and can help us.
18h20	20	RELAY GAME: Knotting Relay In sixes: Cubs run up with their rope, tie the reef or fisherman's (according to advancement level) onto the leader's rope, then run back and the next comes up until they have a long rope	Knotting ropes	Akela
Let's listen to a story of another ship which was shipwrecked by a storm and a very brave girl named Grace Landing.
18h40	5	YARN: The Story of Grace Landing (By Mrs. Alice H. Putman)		Raksha
After a few days on the remote tropical island, Robinson Crusoe started exploring, in search for any lost treasure he might find. Let us go and try to find our own hidden treasure.

18h45	10	WIDE GAME: Treasure Hunt Cubs join up in their Sixes and have to stay together as a Six while hunting for the hidden treasure. Boundaries: only around the hall	Lots of Chocolate coins / or other sweet	Kaa
Victory Celebration – Not only did we discover all the hidden treasure, but we rescued a man too, his name is Friday. Let's celebrate our victory with a toast of Water from the refreshing fresh water stream we discovered during our treasure hunt. Don't forget your buddy, Friday.
18h55	5	Water break
During Robinson Crusoe's stay on the desert island he tried to escape the island by building himself a raft. Many times the seas were so rough that he failed and got washed back ashore.
19h00	10	ACTION/TEAM GAME: Shipwreck Shipwreck is a running game that requires a combination of speed, teamwork, and listening skills. So not necessarily won by the most athletic team. Some teamwork strategy can really even the odds. Each team will need a "ship" (hula hoop). During the game, all of the team members will need to get on their ship. Divide the group into even teams of about 5 to 10 people Set the start line and the finish line. Give each team their ship and have them line up together at the start line. All team members must keep in contact with their ship at all times. If a member lets go, they lose a point. Have the teams start running toward the finish line. Yell "shark". All team members must get on their ship. The first team with everyone aboard wins.	Hula Hoops	Rikki
Captain's coming: Stand up straight and salute, don't move until Captain Raksha says "at ease".
19h10	5	GROUP GAME: Ships and Sailors Played like Simon Says: Individual commands Captain's coming: Stand up straight and salute. Don't move until the captain says "At ease". Sail west: everyone runs to the right side of the playing area. Sail east: everyone runs to the left side of the playing area. Pirates: everyone move to the front of the playing area.	None	Raksha

		No pirates: everyone move to the back of the playing area. Sea sick: Pretend to throw up. Hit the deck: everyone lies down on their stomach. Beached whale: Sailors lie down on their backs. Group commands Man overboard: Everyone finds a partner. One kneels down. The other stands behind, put's a hand on their partner's shoulder. Both put their hands above their eyes like they are scanning the ocean. Three hands rowing: Three sailors line up in a group and pretend to row. Five hands eating: Five sailors get in a circle and pretend to eat. Walk the plank: Six sailors line up, with their hands on the shoulders of the person in front of them.
19h15	5	Tidy up Collection of Bones Notices Advancement Badges Interest Badges		All
19h20	10	GRAND HOWL Flag Down Prayer Dismiss	Totem/skin/ Flag/flag pole Prayer book	Akela Six
New Chum: Introduction to characters of Jungle Book		Silver Wolf: Outdoor Challenge Reef knot	Gold Wolf: Fisherman's knot

YARN:

The Story of Grace Darling By Mrs. Alice H. Putnam

One September night long ago, a steamer was sailing off the coast of Northumberland on her way to Dundee. The pilot had steered her safely until they were as far north as the Farne Islands. But here, the high winds and heavy seas, which the autumn weather often brings the sailor, drove the vessel onto a dangerous ledge of rocks, and she was broken almost in two. There were a good many passengers on the boat, and the captain, with his wife, and many others, were washed off the deck and dashed onto the rocks.

On one of these islands stood a tall light-house called the "Folkstone Light." I suppose it was built of stone, bolted and riveted firmly to the solid rock, for that is the way most of the light-houses on the coast were made.

Often the angry waves would beat against it as they rolled over the whole island, but the keeper was faithful, and from sunset to sunrise the bright light would shine far over the water, and was sometimes a comfort and sometimes a warning to the sailors.

The keeper, Mr. Darling, had a daughter who had grown to be a strong, brave girl—as much at home on the water as on the land. She could row and sail a boat as well as any man about there. It was a part of her work to help her father care for the lamps.

On this stormy night it must have carried hope to the poor half-drowned men to know that someone was near who would help them if possible.

When Grace Darling saw the danger the crew were in, she at once begged her father to get out the boats and go to the aid of the drowning men.

But Mr. Darling said "No, we dare not try it. The sea is too heavy; no boat could live in it. Wait until morning." So hour after hour passed and Grace watched the dreadful storm with a sad heart, for she knew the men would soon grow too weak to cling to the rocks.

At last, towards morning, she said, "Father, I am going. I must at least try to do something for them; don't say no."

The father could not hold his brave child back, and she went alone in the little boat that was tossed like an egg-shell on the heavy sea, now up, up, on the top of a giant wave, and then down deep in the trough made between the waves.

It was well, then, that Grace had gained a man's strength by her rowing and swimming, or she never could have guided her boat so surely to the island, and steered safely around its dangerous, sharp rocks to the place where the steamer (or what was left of it) was wedged.

She was thankful to be able to save the lives of the nine sailors who, moment by moment, were growing weaker and less able to hold on to a place of safety. Grace carried them all back to the light-house in safety.

It was not long before people in other parts of England heard of the brave deed, and many letters and beautiful medals, in remembrance of her courage, were sent her. But she received them very quietly, saying that she had only done what she ought to do, and what any one with her strength ought to have done.

She lived some years after this, but though she has gone from here now, I think folks will always love to think of Grace Darling, the brave girl who risked her own to save other lives.